TO PRINTERS.

Fann-street, London, January 1*st*, 1821.

GENTLEMEN,

I cannot omit the opportunity offered in presenting my first Specimen to your notice, to return my most sincere thanks to the Profession, for that portion of their Patronage which I have received since my succession to Mr. THORNE. Although some difficulties presented themselves in redeeming the Pledge I made, of renovating my Small Founts, and casting them of Metal more durable than those in common use; yet I flatter myself, that those Friends who relied on my Professions, will bear ample testimony that they have not been disappointed, and that the superior facilities of manufacturing Types, possessed by myself, in common with the other Founders of the Metropolis, have been used only to their advantage.

In revising the following Sheets, I feel no hesitation in submitting them to the liberality of the Profession, with the assurance that the encouragement I have met with will be a stimulus to my future exertions.

Remaining, with respect,

Your very humble Servant,

W. THOROWGOOD.

The Creation of Heaven and Earth.

1 IN the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.

2 And the earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep: and the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.

3 And God said, Let there be light: and there was light.

4 And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided the light from the darkness.

5 And God called the light Day, and the darkness he called Night: and the evening and the morning were the first day.

6¶ And God said, Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters.

7 And God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament, from the waters which were above the firmament: and it was so.

8 And God called the firmament Heaven: and the evening and the morning were the second day.

9¶ And God said, Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear: and it was so.

10 And God called the dry land Earth, and the gathering together of the waters called he Seas: and God saw that it was good.

Cast your eyes over the whole earth. Explore the most remote quarters of the east or the west. You may discover tribes of men without policy, or laws, or cities, or any of the arts of life: But no where will you find them without some form of religion. In every region you behold the prostrate worshipper, the temple, the altar, and the offering. Wherever men have existed, they have been sensible that some acknowledgment was due, on their part, to the Sovereign of the world. If in their rudest and most ignorant state this obligation has been felt, what additional force must it acquire by the improvements of human knowledge, but especially by the great discoveries of the Christian revelation?

The benefit of Christ's passion.

WHO hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the LORD revealed?

2. For he shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground: he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him.

3. He is despised and rejected of men: a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised and we esteemed him not.

4. Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God and afflicted.

5. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.

ISAIAH.

CHAP. LIII.

The benefit of Christ's passion.

WHO hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the LORD revealed?

2. For he shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground: he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him.

3. He is despised and rejected of men: a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised and we esteemed him not.

4. Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God and afflicted.

And from the bosom of yon dropping cloud,
While music wakes around, veil'd in a shower
Of shadowing roses, on our plains descend.
O Hertford! fitted or to shine in courts
With unaffected grace, or walk the plain
With innocence and meditation join'd
In soft assemblage, listen to my song,
Which thy own Season paints; when Nature all
Is blooming and benevolent, like thee.
And see where surly Winter passes off,
Far to the north and calls his ruffian blasts;
His blasts obey, and quit the howling hill,

" NO sooner was the flowery crown
Placed on her head, than sleep came down,
Gently as nights of summer fall,
Upon the lids of Nourmahal;—
And suddenly a tuneful breeze,
As full of small, rich harmonies,
As ever wind, that o'er the tents
Of Arab blew, was full of scents,
Steals on her ear, and floats and swells,
Like the first air of morning creeping,
Into those wreathy red sea shells,
Where Love himself, of old, lay sleeping:—
And now a spirit form'd 'twould seem,
Of music and of light, so fair,
So briliantly his features beam,
And such a sound is in the air
Of sweetness, when he waves his wings,
Hovers around her, and thus sings:—

I have not loved the world, nor the world me;
I have not flattered it's rank breath, nor bow'd
To it's idolatries a patient knee;
Nor coin'd my cheek to smiles, nor cried aloud
In worship of an echo; in the crowd
They could not deem me one of such; I stood
Among them, but not of them; in a shroud
Of thoughts which were not their thoughts, and still could,
Had I not filed my mind, which thus itself subdued.

I have not loved the world, nor the world me,
But let us part fair foes; I do believe,
Though I have found them not, that there may be
Words which are things, hopes which will not deceive,
And virtues which are merciful, nor weave
Snares for the failing: I would also deem
O'er others' griefs that some sincerely grieve;
That two, or one, are almost what they seem;
That goodness is no name, and happiness no dream.

Yorkshire, an English county, bounded on the E. by the German Ocean, on the N. by the county of Durham, on the W. by Westmoreland and Lancashire, and on the S. by Derbyshire, Nottinghamshire, and Lincolnshire. It is the largest county in England, being ninety miles in length from E. to W. and seventy-five in breadth from N. to S. It contains 106250 houses 637200 inhabitants 563 parishes, fifty-seven market-towns, and sends thirty members to parliament. The principal rivers are the Teese, that divides this county from Durham, the Swale, the Youre, the Nid, the Ouse, the Warf, the Are, the Calder, the Derwent, the Dun, and the Hull; besides the great river Humber which is made up of many rivers. The soil in some places is very fruitful, but in others barren, gravelly, and stony, and in others again, moorish.

R. THORNE presents his respectful compliments to the Printers of the Metropolis and Country, and begs to remind them, he has now redeemed his promise in offering to their notice his new Script, on a body differing from his last of two-line Pica, which he trusts, from its execution, will claim their future Patronage. The great superiority of this Script is that none of the Letters hang over the body, consequently the risk of their being defaced or broken off is entirely avoided.

It contains 27,814 houſes, 165,680 inhabitants, 161 pa riſhes, 27 market=towns, and ſends 44 mem bers to parliament. It is remarkable for the ſtannaries, where they get tin, and to these belong particular laws, immunities, and pri=vileges. And there are particular places which have the coinage of tin. £3980 ;:!?
